

ROLE PLAYS

Pair up with a classmate and choose one of the two scenarios below. Decide on the role you're going to choose. The two situations are on the phone so use the appropriate phrases – This is [your name] / [your name] speaking – What can I do for you? – Please hang on (...)

Scenario 1
Roles: - Company Representative (Buyer) : This could be an HR Manager, Learning & Development Director, or an Operations Manager. - Sales Representative (Seller) : Someone working for a company that sells VR headsets.
The buyer will place an order for headsets, he needs it for his company's employee training. He will have some technical questions about the product and the compatibility with existing training programs. They will discuss costs, features and their specific industry needs.
The seller can explain the benefits of their VR headsets, help the company understand which model would be the best for their training programs, and provide necessary information on training software or after-sales support.

Roles: - Pilot: a pilot who is skeptical about the effectiveness of VR-based training and prefers more traditional methods, like full-flight simulators. - VR Training Specialist: A representative from the VR company who explains how VR works, its advantages and how it is actually used in pilot training.
The pilot calls a VR training company to get information about the benefits of using VR for training purposes. She/He has some concerns about the realism of VR and the efficiency of training compared to flight simulators.
The training specialist explains how VR can replace traditional methods, saving on fuel costs, reducing environmental impact and enhancing safety. He should be prepared to answer concerns and highlight VR's role in creating realistic scenarios without the cost of traditional methods.
